AMENDED ORDER

13 Defendant has filed a notice indicating that he desires to appear unshackled at upcoming
14 court hearings. Defendant bases his notice on the majority opinion of an abbreviated en banc
15 panel of the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals, which recently opined in dictum 6–5 that a criminal
16 defendant has a Fifth Amendment right to appear in court unshackled unless an individualized
17 examination indicates that physical restraints are the least restrictive means of furthering a
18 compelling government interest, i.e., courtroom security. See United States v. Sanchez-Gomez, 19 2017 WL 2346995, at *13 (9th Cir. May 31, 2017) (en banc) (denying a petition for a writ of 20 mandamus). The Government has moved to strike the notice. The Court will strike the notice.
21 The Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure make no provision for “notices” like the one Defendant
22 has filed.
23

1 Even if the Court were to construe the notice as a motion, the only essential part of the
2 Sanchez-Gomez opinion is found in its last paragraph, wherein the court denied the petitioners'
3 request for a writ of mandamus. See id. at *13. The denial of a petition for a writ of mandamus
4 ordinarily does not even become law of the case, see Kirshner v. Uniden Corp. of Am., 842 F.2d
5 1074, 1078–79 (9th Cir. 1988), much less binding precedent in unrelated actions. Finally, the 6 mandate in Sanchez-Gomez has been stayed until August 29, 2017, two weeks after the 7 upcoming sentencing hearing.

8 CONCLUSION

9 IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that the Motion to Strike (ECF No. 25) is GRANTED, and 10 the Notice (ECF No. 24) is STRICKEN.

11 IT IS SO ORDERED.

12 Dated this 20th day of June, 2017.
